

Stanford eCorner

Nature vs. Nurture in Entrepreneurship

Steve Blank, Stanford Engineering; Mark Suster, Serial Entrepreneur; Patrick Chung, New Enterprises Associates; Vivek Wadhwa, Harvard Law School

April 21, 2010

Video URL: <http://ecorner.stanford.edu/videos/2434/Nature-vs-Nurture-in-Entrepreneurship>

Can entrepreneurs be made? This question is incredibly important for aspiring entrepreneurs, investors, and educational organizations like BASES. For some, the answer is straightforward; if you inherently possess a certain set of qualities, then, at the very least, you have the potential to become a successful entrepreneur. Otherwise, you're out of luck. For others, there is a relatively distinct manner in which entrepreneurs can be developed, through both intentional circumstances and otherwise, such as family background and education.

Transcript