

URL: https://ecorner.stanford.edu/?post\_type=podcast&p=59508

Join Stanford Professor of the Practice Tina Seelig on a deep-dive into how to launch your career with the newest podcast from Stanford eCorner, LEAP! On each episode, Tina will be joined by Stanford alumni from various points in their career to discuss what skills have helped them thrive, and what they wish they'd learned while they were in school. Each episode explores a particular topic, including politics in the workplace, how to negotiate, and working on a team. Be sure to subscribe to the podcast to get new episodes when the series launches.

Transcript

Tina Seelig: Hi.. I'm Tina Seelig.. I'm passionate about helping people craft the futures they dream of creating.. And that's what I do at Stanford University, where I teach classes on creativity, innovation, and entrepreneurship.. I wanted to understand what graduates of our programs learned about the real world once they embarked upon their careers.. Speaker 2: The best negotiations feel like relationship-building.. Tina Seelig: Things they wish they had learned when they were in school.. Speaker 3: How do you define a language, a common language that the team can use? Tina Seelig: So I asked them.. That's what we're doing in this new podcast, called LEAP!.. It's all about the skills needed to see and seize opportunities..

In each episode, I'm going to talk with two alumni from different stages of their career about the soft skills that have allowed them to thrive.. How to negotiate.. Speaker 4: We may not be negotiating all the time, but we're probably negotiating more than we realize.. Tina Seelig: How to work on diverse teams.. Speaker 5: If you can create a culture of candor, then you can often create an environment in which you can actually solve any problem.. Tina Seelig: And how to discover your super power.. Please make sure to subscribe to LEAP! podcast to get new episodes when the series launches...